Interest In Handicrafts Increasing

Blacksburg – A resurgence of interest in crafts on the part of many people today brings a reminder from Katherine Habel, assistant professor of clothing, textiles, and related art and an Extension home furnishings specialist at Virginia Tech, that all quality crafts share certain characteristics.

The characteristics include good workmanship, use of the best available materials, good design, and a wise choice of color. Delete any one of these essential ingregients and the quality of a craft declines sharply, said Miss Habel.

Good taste is involved in making or buying crafts for use in the home. Good taste denotes certain standard not what one happens to like or dislike, Miss Habel noted.

"You can improve your taste in crafts and craftsmanship by studying beautiful crafts made by others. Visits to craft shops, exhibits and fairs all help one become more knowledgeable in the field," she added.

If a person works long enough at a certain craft, using crafts as gifts or saleable items is a natural outgrowth. Homemakers with young children can produce crafts for sale at home. They can add to the family income while remaining in the home with their small children.

And, the therapeutic value of crafts has been demonstrated in working with the handicapped and the older citizen. Working with crafts is one creative use of leisure time. It is important, said Miss Habel, to prepare for retirement years while still young.

Travel on Virginia's major roads increased 5.9 per cent last year, and the interstate system, with 9 per cent of the mileage, served more than 32 per cent of the traffic, according to the State Department of Highways.

Turn Baked Apples Into Americana Sundaes

Top a baked apple with ice cream and a peanut butter sauce and what do you have? A delightful bit of Americana. For the apple, we can thank Johnny Appleseed (actually John Chapman) who for more than fifty years traveled about the new territories of Ohio, Illinois and Indiana developing apple orchards and nurseries of fruit trees. Peanut butter credit goes to a St. Louis physician who hit upon it in 1890. Right or wrong Dolley Madison is noted for popularizing ice cream a good ninety years before the advent of peanut butter. Put them all together as a baked apple peanut butter sundae and you not only have an Americana taste treat but a nutritious slice of America.

While everyone has heard the expression "an apple a day keeps the doctor away," how many know the benefits of peanut butter? The St. Louis doctor who discovered peanut butter was looking for a nutritious easily digested high protein food for some of his patients. And that's just what peanut butter is, a nutritious high protein food that in addition is an excellent source of the B vitamin known as niacin. Team it with ice cream and an apple and it becomes a super dessert.

Baked Apple Peanut Butter Sundae: Core 6 medium cooking apples and peel the upper half. Place in a shallow baking dish. Mix together ½ cup light or dark corn syrup, ½ cup water, ½ teaspoon cinnamon; pour over apples. Bake in a 350 degree F. (moderate) oven about 1 hour or until apples are tender. Serve warm or cold topped with ice cream and Peanut Butter Sauce.

Peanut Butter Sauce: Stir together ¼ cup Skippy creamy or chunk style peanut butter and ⅔ cup light or dark corn syrup.

Copies of the preliminary report will be distributed prior to the hearing and can be obtained by writing to the Council on the Environment, 8th Street Office Building, Richmond, Va., 23219. Some of our best friends are our best customers.

And vice versa.

When folks come in to look at our new cars the first thing we do is listen. That way we know their needs and can match them up with just the right Ford for them. With the right kind of financing. With the right standard and optional equipment.

Say, for instance, you want a little luxury without spending a lot of money. We'd say Galaxie 500. Maybe with a vinyl roof and interior trim, with an AM/FM stereo radio. And all that standard Ford quiet. That would be our suggestion—or you might have one of your own. So we'd listen again until you were happy. After all, if you can't trust your friends, who can you trust? And vice versa.

THE FORD TEAM WANTS TO MAKE YOU HAPPY.

Virginia Grown Foods

(Editor's note: This is another in a series on consumer education by Don L. Long, Virginia Tech Extension economist.)

Blacksburg – Home grown good eating! You may, if you choose, have a meal fit for a king, using native Virginia-grown foods. Come to think of it, we may have several such feasts. It is truly amazing, when you sit down and list them, how many foods are native to Virginia.

Is it appetizers you want? Then, I will ask you what kind do you want? Oysters, apple or tomato juice, clams – all these and others come from Virginia. You will have no trouble working up an appetite with them on the table in front of you.

So, let's move along to the main meal. Some of the world famous Virginia foods available, for example Virginia hams and turkeys, are known wherever gourmets meet. There are others: pork, broilers, eggs and seafoods. Then you may add sweet and white potatoes, tomatoes, cabbage, applesauce and numerous other fruits and vegetables You will have no trouble planning a main course featuring Virginia foods.

How about dessert? What could be more Virginian or more American than apple pie? However, if you fancy something else, there are strawberries, ice cream, blackberries, and peaches. There is plenty from which to enjoy a real Virginian dessert.

Actually, all these foods are only a sample of what you could serve. When you think of all the foods grown or processed within the state, the list almost makes your head swim.

Probably, you will seldom if ever want to go all out and serve an all Virginia meal. Even then you will almost certainly end up serving some non-Virginia items, especially in the beverage department with coffee and tea (although these are processed in Virginia). Yet, it is amazing how varied and how tasteful Virginia foods are.

All this points out another matter of interest to us. The industry of agriculture, that vast complex of farms, processors, merchants and others who furnish us with our food, is a big and vital force in our individual, community and state life. It furnishes us with the food and clothing we need and enjoy so much.

Yet, it also does much more. The industry of agriculture provides jobs by the thousands in Virginia and through the taxes it pays and jobs it provides, helps run community and state governments. It is a vital force in Virginia life.

Improve Lighting In Mobile Homes

Blacksburg – Well designed lighting can add a sparkle to a mobile home just as it does to any environment according to Mrs. Mildred A. Payne, an Extension specialist in home furnishings at Virginia Tech. It can enhance the atmosphere and even add apparent size to your rooms.

Mrs. Payne stated that some mobile home manufacturers have done a good job in improving the lighting in their units. Some of the improvements include fluorescent fixtures under kitchen cabinets to supplement lighting of the work surface beneath. Improved fluorescent fixtures in the ceiling of the kitchen have also helped to make the kitchen a more pleasant place in which to work.

Wall and window lighting in the living room will do a great deal to help "push back the walls", and make the living area appear larger, Mrs. Payne continued. Since many mobile home interiors are paneled with a dark wood finish, more light is needed, the Virginia Tech home economics assistant professor warned.

"Don't get carried away with the decorative lamp hanging in the corner, for that is all it is intended for – decoration. A more functional source of light is needed to give the room an inviting appearance as well as to provide light for seeing. Even with good lighting sources built in, additional lamps are usually needed for reading, and for flexibility."

The bathroom is another place to look for lighting improvements, she noted. Adequate light provided overhead as well as on the sides of the mirror make grooming easy and pleasant.

"Bedrooms, too, have special lighting needs. Each bedroom should have a ceiling fixture and preferably a light switch by the bed," she said.

"Simple improvements often can be made in existing mobile homes by changing bulb types, shields, or entire fixtures. But the expense and bother may be avoided by looking for improved lighting when selecting a new mobile home," Mrs. Payne concluded.
